

Two Canyon Loop Hike, November 10, 2019

After enduring the 32 speed bumps on Lillooet Road to reach the parking lot, our group of seven began this hike with a descent to the Seymour River.

Here the upgraded trail proceeds alongside the rushing waters to the impressive new and high suspension bridge.

This span was needed due to the large 2014 rock slide which caused the old bridge to be washed out.

A climb on the Baden-Powell trail followed by some downhill delivered us to Lynn Canyon, where we paused for lunch downstream from Twin Falls and its beautiful green water.

Later, the group crossed the rickety, famous and very crowded Lynn suspension bridge, and returned to our starting point.

Lots of great scenery and company on this trip.

Thanks to Gerard for driving and the excellent photos.
