

Petgill Lake: Oct 10, 2024

Shu Chuan liang

Fri, Oct 11,
12:50 PM (2 days
ago)

to me

Petgill Lake: Oct 10, 2024

This hike was scheduled to be on Thanksgiving Monday, but the weather forecast said it would be a rainy day. Hence, we changed to Oct 20 Thursday for a more favorable weather condition for this more challenging Petgill Lake hike. There were 3 BOCers and one guest met at 7:30am to carpool from Burnaby.

Starting at Murrin Lake, the path rises steeply with many exposed roots and large rocks to be navigated.

Excellent views of the Squamish area and Mt. Garibaldi rewarded us after forty-five minutes of climbing. The trail improved slightly as we followed an old logging road, but next came a series of gullies to descend and then ascend higher. At the three-hour mark, the route passed above the lake and led to spectacular vistas of Howe Sound with its pale green hue. After a well-deserved lunch break, we made the return journey to the trailhead.

Photos by Su-Jane, Susan

Driver: Su-Jane

Trip report by Su-Jane