

Despite the threat of prolonged rain, three well-prepared hikers met for the climb up this suburban trail. Several hundred steps have been constructed on BC Hydro right-of-way, leading to excellent southern views.

The steepness does ease, and we reached the high point, after an elevation gain of 250 meters, as heavy drops started falling in earnest.

We completed our trip after having lunch under a (very welcome!) shelter near Rocky Point Park.

Jim McCavour