

Burnaby Mountain Boxing Day Walk

After a week of very cold temperatures, two large snowfalls, freezing rain and just plain rain, Boxing Day weather was perfect for a pleasant walk.

The upper trails still had significant snow, ice and slush present. We chose the lower level paths as they provided a great alternative. Our group of six proceeded up the quickly-flowing Stoney Creek. We turned west, following the 'pipeline path' to Burnaby Urban Trail. After passing Squint Lake near the city golf course, the group had snacks and appetizers at the nearby pub, then retraced our steps to the starting point at Cameron Centre. A fine outing during the holiday season.
